

Winter Water Mandela

BY MORGAN MANLEY
COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY

Water exhibits geometric beauty in both its solid and liquid forms. This painting was visually inspired by the near perfection and beauty of water, especially in the delicate snowflake. As a mandala, I wanted this work to evoke ideas of water as reflections of humans and all beings. Water, like humans, has a tendency to be influenced by its surroundings. Snowflakes fall from the sky in millions, but not one of them is the same. Ideally this painting will be enjoyed for its clarity and calming and geometric beauty, and also the imperfections that may draw the viewer in for a closer, more introspective gaze.
